

Retired – Alaska

August 6, 1967 The State sells the Kalakala to Robert Resoff (highest bidder $101,551); who moves her to Dutch Harbor

“...ferries are more than machinery, more than names and dates and places. They have been the focal points for... gossip, welcome breaks in the journeys of weary travelers, refuges for lovers, and adventure ships for children.” — Magnificent Vision Recaptured

Robert Resoff transforms the Kalakala into a mobile crab-processing vessel, only to later be abandoned, rediscovered, reclaimed, and brought home.

November 1998 Kalakala re-enters Elliot Bay — after 32 years in Alaska.

2004 The Kalakala moves to Tacoma with plans for restoration. Fans and investors hope to bring the Kalakala back to life. Their efforts encounter road blocks and the ship sits idle until January 2015 when it is demolished.
