Dear Parking Advisory Board,
Last Sunday a Seattle friend and I drove to the Kirkland library. The library parking lot was full, as was much of the parking garage. We headed for an empty spot in the garage, and saw that it said "Permit parking only," with an exception for Saturdays. I was pretty sure that Sundays would be OK also, but I wasn't certain. My friend did not want to take a chance of getting a ticket, so we found a different parking spot. I saw other drivers looking confused as well.

I did not know that parking is not enforced on Sundays.

I'm writing to ask if it would be possible to include Sundays on the library garage parking signs.

Thanks!
